Australian Prescriber* joins the National Prescribing Service (NPS)

Australian Prescriber, an independent review of therapeutics for health professionals, has joined the National Prescribing Service (NPS), Australia's peak advisory and educational organisation about medicines.

"The National Prescribing Service is very proud to have Australian Prescriber join our organisation. Australian Prescriber brings with it a fine national and international reputation and profile and it is held in high esteem by Australian health professionals," said Dr Stephen Phillips, GP and Chairman of the NPS.

"The NPS Board have committed to preserve the integrity, reputation and independence of Australian Prescriber. The Editorial Executive Committee, chaired by Professor Robert Moulds, along with the staff of Australian Prescriber will play a vital role in maintaining this high quality publication", Dr Phillips continued.

"The Editorial Executive Committee is very pleased to have joined the National Prescribing Service", said Professor Moulds. "The NPS and Australian Prescriber have had a close working relationship for a number of years, working together to provide independent evidence-based information to health professionals. So it is a very appropriate match."

The Commonwealth Government launched Australian Prescriber in 1975. It is currently sent to more than 55,000 health professionals both in Australia and overseas.

For further information visit the Australian Prescriber website at <http://www.australianprescriber.com> or the NPS website at <http://www.nps.org.au/>.

Australian Prescriber is an independent review providing critical commentary on therapeutic topics for health professionals. Australian Prescriber is published by the National Prescribing Service (NPS), an independent Australian organisation for Quality Use of Medicines.
